Excerpt: . . . obliged to select for him an original habitat corresponding with these conditions. Let us remark, once for all, that where these conditions have been maintained, there the race has invariably made least progress from its original state. The lowest forms of man-life are tropical. The most original types are found in those regions where the environment has prevented the evolution of the higher human varieties. In a word, the life of man seems in the tropical situation to have continued on Ize orzlglmzlpam, with little variation under the influences of physical nature. Not so, however, with those peoples who have departed from the original enDeylgpmentcq. vironment. As soon as the unclothed primitive man, P Yi8in-covered with his delicate skin, made his way from his warm and equable climatic surroundings and began to be exposed, first to the vicissitudes, and further on to the rigors of higher latitudes, he began to acquire the discipline of nature, to be specialized in his faculties, quickened in his energies, and strengthened for battle with the op. posing forces of the material world. With this he began to rise in the scale of existence. The extreme distance of his departure is now measured by the span between the Papuan and the German. The significance of these facts is that human life began from some region where tropical or semitropical conditions prevailed, and that its progress has been coincident with its departure into regions where the warfare of nature and...
