The play is set in Normandy in 1944, immediately after the Allied landing. Scenes take place in the officers tent, where Smith s stand for what he considers justice, common sense and humanity, comes to its culminating point. When he learns that the High Command has refused to allow the defenceless citizens of Le Havre to be evacuated, he disobeys the commanding officer in a dramatic scene. He is arrested, cashiered and sentenced to a year in prison. Press: The bad Soldier Smith turns on an officer on active service who for conscience reasons, refuse to obey orders. Much of it is based on the author s own war-time experiences. It comes over...
